VOL. XVIII.] MONDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1817. [No. 5074.

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS.

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of persons can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficatious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Hamilton's Elixir,

A sovereign remedy for colds, obstinate coughs, asthmas, sore throats, catarrhs, and approaching consumptions.—To parents who have children afflicted with the HOOPING COUGH, this discovery is of the first magnitude, as it affords immediate relief, checks the progress, and in a short time entirely removes the most cruel disorders to which children are liable. The Elixir is perfectly agreeable, and the dose so small that no difficulty arises in taking it.

Hamilton's Grand Restorative,

Is recommended as an invaluable medicine for the speedy relief and permanent cure of

Nervous Disorders, Consumptions, Lowness of spirits, Loss of appetite, Impurity of b'ood, Hysteric affection, Inward weaknesses and debility, Violent cramps in the stomach and back, Indigestion, Melancholy, Gout in the stomach, Pains in the limbs, Relaxations, etc.

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.

A safe and effectual remedy for acute and chronic rheumatism, gout, rheumatic gout, palsy, lumbago, numbness, white swellings, chilblains, sprains, bruises, pain in the face and neck, etc. etc.

Lee's Ointment for the Itch.

Warranted an infallible remedy at one application, may be used with perfect safety by pregnant women, or on infants a week old, not containing a particle of mercury or any dangerous ingredient whatever, and not accompanied with that tormenting smart which attends the application of other remedies.

Hahn's true & genuine German Corn Plaister.

An infallible remedy for corns, speedily removing them root and branch, without giving any pain.

The Genuine Persian Lotion,

So celebrated among the fashionable throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellent minerals, the basis of other lotions, and of unparalleled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin, freckles, pimples, inflamatory redness, scurfs, tetters, ringworms, sunburns, prickly heat, &c.

Hahn's genuine Eye Water,

A sovereign remedy for all diseases of the eyes, whether the effect of natural weakness or of accident.

Tooth Ache Drops.

The only remedy yet discovered which gives immediate and lasting relief in the most severe instances.

Lee's Infallible Ague and Fever Drops

For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

☞ At the place of sale pamphlets may be had gratis, describing cures performed by the above medicines; the number, importance and respectability of which, fully justify every article of this advertisement.

THE LAST ROSE OF SUMMER.

'Tis the last rose of summer,
Left blooming alone;
All her lovely companions
Are faded and gone:
No flow'r of her kindred,
No rose bud is nigh,
To reflect back her blushes,
Or give sigh for sigh!

I'll not leave thee, thou lone one!
To pine on the stem;
Since the lovely are sleeping,
Go, sleep thou with them:
Thus kindly I scatter
Thy leaves o'er the bed
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead.

So soon may I follow,
When friendships decay,
And from love's shining circle
The gems drop away!
When true hearts lie withered,
And fond ones are flown,
O! who would inhabit
This bleak world alone!

From the Pittsburg Gazette.

EXTRACTS FROM THE JOURNAL OF A VOYAGE TO THE MEDITERRANEAN.

CHAPTER III.

Then walks the Father of the tempest forth. THOMPSON.

On Wednesday morning the vessel was surrounded by a school of porpoises; they were seen for a short time sporting on the surface of the water and then disappeared steering away rapidly northward and eastward. These manœuvres are in conformity with the singular habits of these animals. When the ocean is smooth, they are to be seen bounding along its surface—rising above and plunging below it,—with an activity and playfulness but little in conformity with their heavy and sluggish appearance. They are also said to possess the power of anticipating the changes of the weather, and previously to a storm are supposed to direct their course towards the point from whence the wind is about to blow.

Black and heavy clouds began to lower about us on all sides, and presented every indication of a rapidly approaching storm. The vigilant eye of the experienced seaman soon discovered the danger that threatened, and every nerve was exerted to avert it. The topsails were now close reefed, and all the other sails taken in, and the vessel layed to close to the wind.

"The sailors now to give the ship relief,
Reduce the topsails by a double reef,
Each lofty yard with slacken'd cordage [wheels,
reels,
Rattle the creaking blocks and ringing
Down the tall masts the topsails sink a-main, again."
And now reduced resume their posts

The prudence of these precautions were now exemplified. About three o'clock, P. M. a tremendous squall struck us; the topsails could no longer be carried and were furled, and the main storm-stay-sail was set.—Circumstances which we had deemed peculiarly unfortunate, now providentially turned to our advantage.—Our crew was miserably bad—greatly deficient in numbers, and still more so in activity and skill—in short, they were mostly landsmen and boys. We had two Lieutenants, both of them were sick, and no sailing master; and our gallant little brig was laden more deeply than was either safe or convenient. But the certainty of danger, suggested a degree of prudence, which perhaps under other circumstances would have been neglected.—The topmasts were struck, and even the lower yards secured upon deck,—an uncommon precaution—but which in the end saved us.—For about three hours the wind blew with a fury that it is impossible to describe—the rain poured down in torrents, and the wind and waves howled in dreadful concert.

I had gone below in the beginning of the storm, and was sleeping very comfortably, when I was awakened by a tremendous surge, which almost threw me out of my birth. On opening my eyes I scarcely knew whether to smile or to shudder:

"To laugh were want of goodness and of grace, [face."
But to be grave exceeds all power of

A heavy sea had struck the vessel on one side and had thrown her nearly on her beam ends: every thing in the ward room—chairs, tables, trunks and lob-lolly boys, were thrown into one promiscuous heap, while the water was rushing in torrents down the hatchway. The Purser, who was in his birth opposite to me, waked at the same time, and in the first moments of surprise we stared at each other in mute astonishment; while the boys, scrambling in the water to rid themselves of the lumber in which they were entangled, roared lustily. In the midst of the scene stood our first Lieutenant, who after several hours fatigue, had stepped below to refresh himself,—drenched to the skin, with a glass of grog in one hand and holding fast by the bulk-head with the other, he stood laughing immoderately at our situation. Between the fear of being drowned in bed, on the one hand, and the excitement to risibility on the other, I remained for a moment, in statu quo. "Hurra, soldier," said the sea officer, "you are not aboard of a Fort now—turn out—you never saw such a sight in your life." Accordingly I got up, and went on deck to behold, what was yet a novelty to me, a storm at sea.

"A change it was
That dazzled, not delighted me; a scene
Of novelties, that quickly ceased to charm."

The utter darkness of the night, for such it was by this time, the roaring of the waves which ever and anon broke completely over us—the command of the officer conveyed through a trumpet, which gave his stentorian voice a hoarse and sepulchral tone—the curses of some, and the groans of others, of the men—the creaking of the joints of the timber, which seemed to announce their separation; in short, the variety of harsh and discordant sounds, added to the darkness—gave me no pleasing sensation. I ventured to inquire of Captain K. his opinion of our situation: it was given in a few words, he had done every thing that could be done—the guns had been loosed from their lashings, and were ready to be launched into the ocean—the carpenter stood with his axe to the main-mast, ready to hew it down at a moment's warning—yet if the tempest did not abate, there was but little hope.

"You wanted to see a storm," said K.—alluding to a wish I had expressed the day before—"Yes," said I—"and my curiosity is completely satisfied."

It was a scene that I should think myself presumptuous in attempting to describe—and perhaps it is fortunate that it is so, for if it were possible for me to succeed in the attempt, there are few who would not doubt my veracity.

THE SOLDIER WITHOUT HANDS.

From Sir Richard Phillips' Morning Walk from London to Kew.

I accosted a young man who had lost both arms, and was walking pensively between the trees. After some expressions of heartfelt commisseration, I enquired by what mischance he had met with so untoward a wound. He told me he was in the act of loading his musket, when a cannon ball passing before him, carried off one arm above the elbow, and so shattered the other, that it was necessary to amputate. He then named some paltry battle where this accident befel him; the issue of which to either of the contending parties was, as I recollected, not worth the joint of a little finger, even if the entire object of the campaign, or war, was worth so much! But, said I, you are of course well provided for in the hospital. "No," (he replied) there is not room for me at present; but, owing to the severity of my wounds, I have a double allowance as an out pensioner; yet (he modestly remarked) it may easily be supposed that even a double allowance is not enough for a man who cannot help himself in any thing—I cannot dress myself, nor even eat nor drink, but am obliged to be fed like a child; I have a poor old mother who does her best for me, or"—here the young man's voice faultered, and some tears hung on his cheek—for alas, even these he could neither wipe away nor conceal! Parched must have been the eye that would not mingle tears with those of this poor fellow, on hearing the tale of his unchangeable fate! I found too that my own utterance sympathised with his—but, shewing him a shilling, and indicating, by signs, the difficulty I felt in putting him in possession of it—"here, sir," said he, "and God bless you;" then, stooping with his mouth, I put it between his lips!—and, unable to speak, we separated.

ALEXANDRIA:

SOUTH AMERICA.

The conduct of the British government with respect to Spain and her colonies appears every day more and more applicable to our reasoning on this very important subject. It will be remembered that in the last observations which we hazarded upon it, we laid some stress upon the suggestion that the cause of the Patriots, if not actively, was passively aided by England, and the intelligence brought by the Maria (Duplex) tends very strongly to countenance that presumption. "Ships continue to be equipped in the river (says a London paper) for the purpose of conveying officers, non-commissioned officers and privates to aid the Patriots in South America. At present one vessel is quite ready to sail, having on board officers fully equipped, and 200 privates, to form a rifle corps. Another is in a forward state of preparation, and has appointments for a cavalry regiment 600 strong: a third is freighted with equipments for a lancers' corps. The officers are all men who have seen active service, and are of every rank from lieutenant colonels to ensigns. The organization is so complete, and the arrangements so happily made, that they will be ready for immediate service on their arrival in America."

From this we are warranted in concluding that the preparations of which it speaks are not the first, but that others of the same kind had before gone on the same destination. "Ships continue to be equipped," &c. The inference from which plainly is, that either the cabinet of St. James winks at the proceeding, or that it is not within their competence to prevent any British subjects, who may like the enterprise, from going in arms to join the Patriots. In either of these two cases, will not an awkward responsibility rest with some parts of our government, or some defect be apparent in our constitution? If the British ministers, by a stroke of masterly secret policy, shall have insinuated themselves permanently between us and the Spanish colonies, what shall our political managers have to say in their own justification? We are at a loss to conceive. If the British government be restrained by the constitution of that realm from prohibiting their subjects from going with their arms when or where or for what purposes they please, shall we pretend to say that our constitution, under which American citizens are now restrained by executive proclamation from joining the Patriots, or even selling them armed vessels, is as free as that of England? It would be a contradiction in terms to affirm it. Or, finally, if the constitution does not authorise such an act of coercion, and nevertheless the government, that is to say the legislature or the executive, or both, have taken upon them to interdict the rights of our citizens in that respect, what will it be in them? We tremble to think of it—name it we dare not; and the upshot will be, that while we incessantly—we, the people, and our flatterers and oracles, the public journals, and our kind complimentary master-servants or servant-masters, who rule us, cocker us up in return for our votes with the adulatory assurance that we are the most—nay, some will have it, the only free people on earth; assuring us at the same time that the British are all slaves, a reference to a plain matter of fact, open to the eyes of the world, proves the truth to be this, that an Englishman may, if he pleases, even against the will of his government, take up his sword and proclaim to his country, "I am going to join the Patriots of South America, and help them to fight for their emancipation from colonial despotism." In other words, that if an agent for the Patriots in England solicits an Englishman to join the army of freedom in South America, the Englishman may say "I will," and keep his promise; while; if the same question be put in America to one of our citizens, he can only say "I would if I could, or dare, but my government have forbidden me under severe penalties, and I am afraid to attempt it."

It appears from a Baltimore paper, the purveyors of which are not seldom or meanly conversant in political secrets of importance, that Messrs. Cæsar A. Rodney, John Graham and Theodoric Bland are to proceed in the Congress frigate to South America, and that Mr. Brackenridge is to attend them as secretary.—This is the mission, respecting which we have already thrown out some hints in speaking of the letter to Mr. Monroe, of which it is now generally known that Mr. Brackenridge is the author. That gentleman's having published the opinions contained in that letter while under engagement with government, gives a pleasing cast to our hopes upon the occasion. Our worst fear now is, that we may be too late—too tardy in our motions, and that the place intended for our commissioners will be so pre occupied by agents for England as to leave scanty room for the former. That the enterprising, vigilant, active, never slumbering cabinet of Great Britain have not, long before this, had able intriguers and agents about the head-quarters of patriotism in each and every of the revolted provinces, we will believe when we have very high authority for it; but not till then. When a grand national game is playing, and a boundless commerce is the stake, he who expects that she will not take a hand must know little or nothing about her.—Besides, on the score of aiding colonies to throw off their dependence on the mother country, Spain has been for a long time a heavy creditor to Great Britain; and Britain, who is known to be a most punctual paymaster, will, no doubt, with all imaginable good will, snatch at this fair opportunity to liquidate the debt.

A WORD TO CONGRESS.

When an American beholds a character which, from infancy has been the object of his honest regard, reverenced by other nations besides his own, it is then, (we speak emphatically the word then) it is then, that he feels the pride of patriotism in his heart. Washington, a name consecrated to us by so many endearing recollections, is now receiving from foreign nations that applause, which he has derived from his own: his orb descended to the horizon more large, more luminous and serene, than when it shone in the zenith. It now remains a question for Congress to decide at their ensuing session, whether, when the better portion of the civilized world unite in homage to the ashes of this American Hero, they alone will be unmindful of his fame: whether when his glory is reflected upon us from the East and from the West, from the North and from the South, his ashes shall sleep in the tomb of his ancestors, without a monument. But we would not recommend a removal of his ashes from Mount Vernon. That mansion has been hallowed by the birth, hallowed by the death, and it is now hallowed by the tomb of the hero: It seems to comprehend his character from the cradle to the grave—here his eye first witnessed the beams of opening light, and here his ashes await the day of resurrection. Mount-Vernon becomes thus consecrated by all the best feelings of the human heart, and a removal of those illustrious remains, seems now a sort of sacrilege. This Mount, rendered so dear by the life, the death, and by the burial of Washington, we conceive ought to be the property of the nation. It may by descent, or by purchase, become the property of one insensible to its value. The mansion may be torn down, and even the slumbering remains disturbed in the grave. If this estate was purchased by the U. States, and a monument erected on the tomb where the ashes repose, it would be a far more honorable testimony of our respect for the memory than the removal of the body. We all know how dear the name of Shakespeare is to an Englishman, and the old mulberry tree under which the Bard formerly reposed, participated in the homage that was paid to his memory. The estate at length became the property of a man, whose heart was a stranger to all these sympathies, who caused the tree to be felled, for the purpose of selling the timber. This tree was purchased by an individual who manufactured it into snuff boxes, tooth picks, etc. and exposed the articles for sale. An independent fortune was made by this speculation, for each admirer of the Bard, held himself in honor bound to purchase one of these consecrated relics. Who knows but in the progress of time, if Mount Vernon remains private property, that such sacrilege may not be committed.

"To preserve in all their integrity the feelings connected with the Heroes, and Lawgivers of a country, is the only way in which patriotism itself can be preserved—these sympathies are the links which bind different generations together—thus for example, those who have seen Washington, venerate Mount-Vernon because it was the cradle, and is the sepulchre of him, whose name was so dear. The next generation, with all those sympathies transmitted by their ancestors, will regard Mount Vernon as the representative of that Hero; they will venerate the place that gave him birth, and that now contains his ashes, because they are denied the sight of his face.

We sincerely hope that Congress, at their next session, will turn their attention to this subject; the ashes of Washington should be the property of the nation; and as he devoted his life from his cradle to the grave, to the service of his country, that country ought to guard his consecrated remains."

From the same, November 14.

We give the following remarks from the pen of the editor of the New York Daily Advertiser. As congress will shortly convene, we can but hope that some member will be found to bring this question before that body for their consideration.

The editor of the Baltimore Federal Republican, suggests the propriety of congress purchasing Mount Vernon, and raising a monument over the tomb of general Washington. He says—"The Mount, rendered so dear by the life, the death, and by the burial of Washington, we conceive ought to be the property of the nation." If congress will erect a proper monument to the memory of that great man, commemorating, as in justice it ought, his civil and political, as well as his personal and military virtues and talents; every real friend to his character would most cordially rejoice. There has been a strong disposition in some men, who profess to be great admirers of gen. Washington, to confine their admiration, and their gratitude, to his achievements in the field, intending doubtless to reserve the wreath of political fame for some other head. This would be gross and palpable injustice. Gen. Washington's services to his country, in his political capacity, were equally eminent and illustrious, as those which he performed as the leader of our armies. He was the head of the convention of 1787—the constitution received his decided approbation, and support—his opinions, and influence were very efficacious in procuring its adoption—under his eye and care its establishment took place, and its operations commenced—and its great leading principles were fixed and settled under his presidency—those principles which are now so generally acknowledged to be just, correct and safe.

Who else can claim, among the politicians and statesmen of our country the undisputed pre-eminence. The great men who assisted him in forming our national policy and character, in the infancy of our government, are entitled to distinguished notice, and the most profound respect. They co-operated with him in the great task which was placed in their hands and the highest commendation beyond the approbation of their own consciences, which can be bestowed upon them, is that they were his confidential friends, that their opinions coincided with his, and that they were fellow-laborers with him in providing for, supporting and perpetuating the dignity, the reputation, and the prosperity of their country. But, great as were their talents and their virtues, it is very questionable whether their united efforts could have withstood the onset which was so vigorously made, and the succeeding efforts which were unremittingly and perseveringly continued, against their labours for the good their country. We have no doubt, that the character, opinion, exertions, talents, and influence, of gen. Washington, were essentially necessary for the formation and adoption of the national constitution, and for the establishment, organization and operations, of the government under it.

Had general Washington died immediately after the peace of 1783, it is by no means certain that his great services in achieving the Independence of his country, would not have been in a great measure lost to that country. The embarrassments, difficulties and dangers of the states, were never greater, than during the first five years after the peace.—How anxiously he felt them, how much he endeavored to surmount and avoid them, his correspondence with his intimate friends, most emphatically declares. His patriotism was pure, exalted and sublime. He was not accustomed to regard national pride and national vanity, as the sole, or the highest objects of attainment, in the view of civil government. Justice, morality, a sacred and sincere regard for national rights, and for civil and religious freedom, a high and real reverence for religion itself, with great disinterestness, liberality, a frank ingenuous disposition, and an utter abhorrence of hypocrisy, were some of the leading traits of his policy and character.

His title to this pre-eminence is unquestionable—it ought to be unquestioned; and his monument, if ever erected, ought to acknowledge it in clear and unequivocal language.

But, if the idea should ever be entertained of the nation's purchasing M. Vernon, the heir of its former proprietor ought to see the monument over the tomb, upon the spot, before he makes a conveyance, and to place in the clearest terms a clause in that conveyance, that his remains shall never be removed. He has once, at least, solemnly declined the proposition, we hope and trust he will continue to do so, as often as it may be renewed.—The capture, pillage and conflagration of the public buildings at Washington, by a handful of hostile troops, is a lasting memento to those who have the custody of the Body of the Great Father of his Country, never to suffer its hallowed repose to be disturbed, until that body, together with the mighty congregation of the dead, shall realize the command inscribed upon the coffin in which it is contained.

If we remember aright, the inscription on Washington's coffin is

"ARISE TO JUDGMENT!"

February 13th. On Friday, a travelling man, who said his name was Bond, called upon several inhabitants of the town of Eye, endeavoring to obtain subscriptions for a new history of Botany Bay, price 10s. 6d. of which he pretended to be the author, and which, he said, was then issuing from the press, and would be delivered at the post office there within three weeks at longest from that time. He might, however, have said within three hours; for those persons with whom he had succeeded in obtaining the half guineas, received each a little trumpery pamphlet, not worth a shilling, almost immediately, sent by the first hand he met when he had left the town scarcely a mile.

The above impostor has but one eye, is about 5 feet 8 inches high, of dark complexion, and travels in a basket gig. He had before visited Framlingham, Stradbrook, and Hosene, and was proceeding, it is imagined, through Erome and Oakley for Harleston. The same itinerant is believed to have recently visited Mildenhall, Newmarket, and other adjacent towns; and by the list of names he had procured, there is every reason to believe he has practised in this fraudulent way a long time.

Such a one was in Georgetown last week, and is said to be now in Alexandria raising contributions, & will probably go on to Fredericksburg, Richmond, and the southward.

There is surplus timber and fire wood enough on the part I purpose selling to pay, with judicious management, more than half the purchase money, at the price I ask. Contiguity to market is also among its advantages; it being within less than a mile of Mr. Jonathan Janney's mill, where the Alexandria price may be had for grain. Persons wishing to purchase will apply to the subscriber, residing at Cedar Grove, ten miles below Alexandria, and one below Janney's mill.

The title is old, and indisputable, having been located and surveyed by Gen. Washington before the Revolution. For Sale or Exchange

FOR property in or near the District of Columbia,

A Plantation,

in a rich and flourishing part of Kentucky, near Louisville, on the Ohio. The Tract contains about 250 acres, mostly strong rich Land, 30 or 40 of which are cleared, and under partial improvement, the rest in timber. This land is well calculated for the culture of tobacco, hemp, corn, wheat and flax, part of it being what is called bottom land, of a deep, luxurious, and inexhaustible soil, and part of it upland. There are on the Tract, cabins, corn cribs, a smoke house, &c. in the usual style of that part of the country; and within musket shot of the principal improvement is a good mill. The whole is centrally and advantageously situated on Cove's creek, a branch of Salt river (which is navigable for boats) having Shepherdsville on the north, distant about 15 miles, Louisville on the north-west distant 22 miles; Springfield and Bealsburg on the southeast; Bairdstown on the south distant 12 miles; Middleburg on the east distant 8 miles; Shelbyville and Frankfort (the seat of government) on the northeast distant from the former 22 miles; and Middleton on the north distant 20 miles. The country abounds with salt licks.

The vicinity of this plantation to Louisville, is a consideration of no small importance, as that town is evidently destined to be the great emporium of the state. The rapid advance in the price of property within a few years, already manifests its improvement, prosperity and wealth.

For further particulars, and for the terms, which will be liberal, apply by letter or otherwise, to the undersigned, at the City of Washington. Title indisputable. The land is now held under a general warrantee.

He is about 23 or 24 years of age, 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high, and was raised in Manchester. Ned is well made, high forehead and large flat nose: had on when he went away a grey coat and pantaloons, but as he was well provided with cloathing of various kinds, it is probable he may have changed his dress. It is believed he went off with his wife, who it appears left Richmond at the same time: she is very black, and, I believe, somewhat pitted with the small pox, talks a great deal, of short stature, and rather thick made. Ned is very artful, and may probably attempt to pass for a free man; he has a down look when spoken to. John Jackson & Co.

James Kennedy & Son,

BOOKSELLERS,

KING-STREET, ALEXANDRIA,

RESPECTFULLY inform the public that they have just received from Lee's Medicine Store, No. 46, Maiden lane, New-York, a fresh supply of the following valuable MEDICINES:

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges,

Which have within sixteen years past cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from WORMS, and from obstructions or foulness in the stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or griping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known.

Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Teres or large round worm; the Ascarides or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitine or short flat white worm; and lastly, the Tænia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; pains in the head and thighs and lowness of spirits; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent "the vomiting and purging of children"—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Restorative Powder for the Teeth and Gums.

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, &c.

The testimony of a number of person can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventive; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Hamilton's Elixir,

A sovereign remedy for colds, obstinate coughs, asthmas, sore throats, catarrhs, and approaching consumptions.—To parents who have children afflicted with the HOOPING COUGH, this discovery is of the first magnitude, as it affords immediate relief, checks the progress, and in a short time entirely removes the most cruel disorders to which children are liable. The Elixir is perfectly agreeable, and the dose so small that no difficulty arises in taking it.

Hamilton's Grand Restorative,

Is recommended as an invaluable medicine for the speedy relief and permanent cure of

Nervous Disorders	Violent cramps in
Consumptions	the stomach and
Lowness of spirits	back
Loss of appetite	Indigestion
Impurity of blood	Melancholy
Hysteric affection	Gout in the stomach
Inward weaknesses	Pains in the limbs
and debility	Relaxations, etc.

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.

A safe and effectual remedy for acute and chronic rheumatism, gout, rheumatic gout, palsy, lumbago, numbness, white swellings, chilblains, sprains, bruises, pain in the face and neck, etc. etc.

Lee's Ointment for the Itch.

Warranted an infallible remedy at one application, may be used with perfect safety by pregnant women, or on infants a week old, not containing a particle of mercury or any dangerous ingredient whatever, and not accompanied with that tormenting smart which attends the application of other remedies.

Hahn's true & genuine German Corn Plaister.

An infallible remedy for corns, speedily removing them root and branch, without giving any pain.

The Genuine Persian Lotion,

So celebrated among the fashionable throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellent minerals, the basis of other lotions, and of unparalleled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin, freckles, pimples, inflamatory redness, scurfs, tetters, ringworms, sunburns, prickly heat, &c.

Hahn's genuine Eye Water,

A sovereign remedy for all diseases of the eyes, whether the effect of natural weakness or of accident.

Tooth Ache Drops.

The only remedy yet discovered which gives immediate and lasting relief in the most severe instances.

Lee's Infallible Ague and Fever Drops

For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

☞ At the place of sale pamphlets may be had gratis, describing cures performed by the above medicines; the number, importance and respectability of which, fully justify every article of this advertisement.
